

K

K

K

TOP BY
SIDAN NOVRLUZOVA, BELT BY SIMONE ROCHA, studio
KRISTIN SIGUS USED AS SKIRT, TOP BY STYLISTS
19.10.

ER MUYLAERT AT 254 FOREST
CHERS AT A MANAGEMENT
E KIKIL AT SINE GINGBORG
T SCOOP MODELS
08.10.18
STANT BETTY KIRAG
ANESSA MERRILL

EARTHSIDE by SANDER MUYLAERT

p75

450

Pololw

130

407
TRAIN
150

KProject

Title TBA

Changing the LANDSACPE OF BRIDAL WEAR by pushing a SUSTAINABLE AGENDA

WHO ARE WE?

We are proposing an artisanal bridal wear brand that seeks to combine upcycling of local materials with craftsmanship. Our approach is informed by cultural phenomena and a feminist perspective on design. Our mission is to elevate the act of wearing into a meaningful, empower- ing experience.

Having worked very closely together for the past six months in our studio, this proposal seems like an exciting continuation and utilization of the studies.

THE PROBLEM

During our studies we've been questioning, where the fashion industry is headed and how we could best steer a change in the industry, which is known for its wastefulness because of detached consumers.

Empirical research in bridalwear shows that the current bridal market lacks excitement, offering expensive, uninspiring, and outdated styles. There are not many agents of sustainable change in bridal wear currently, and we especially see a gap in the Danish market. However, numbers show an increase in the interest for upcycled wedding attire, where "global searches on Pinterest [...] increased 33% (comparing data from December 2021 to March 2022, versus the year prior)". (Soo Hoo, 2022)

THE SOLUTION

With our solution we are offering uniquely crafted bridal wear, where each garment is a testimony of individuality and a bold statement of our own and our customer's commitment to a sustainable future.

By re-purposing garments and reviving carefully selected stagnant fabrics we will embrace new-found value in upcycling; by creating opportunities for personal expression we are celebrating individuality.

The change towards a more positive fashion future comes from within and together we are aiming to establish a powerhouse of women that proclaims everything that is important to us in an innovative brand. Utilizing key concepts of couture in our approach to design and in the journey of making, we aim to blur the boundaries between couture and ready-to-wear. By committing to upcycling discarded fabrics and previously loved garments, we will tell stories of what was and will be.

WHAT'S NEXT?

In the first year, we would establish our brand's identity and community. By the second year, we aim to enhance the customer journey and collaborate with wedding planners for sustainable wedding solutions. From the third year onward, we will expand internationally while ensuring fair work environments and growing our network of talented makers.

THE BENEFITS

.

.

UPCYCLING - RETHINKING AND REPUR- POSING: Sourcing locally and building value in what is considered as waste.

USER-FOCUS: Creating close relations to our consumers and letting them inform our designs.

COLLABORATION-ORIENTED:

Building partnerships with local artisans, makers, talents, and sustainable textile suppliers (textile collection centers).

*/KRISTIN SIGUS & KAREN LAMBERT MÜLLER Fashion,
Clothing and Textile - New Landscapes of Change*

The Royal Danish Academy 2024